

MARK SELBY & TIA SILLERS

It's hard to imagine a happier or more successful musical couple than the husband/wife team of Mark Selby and Tia Sillers. As songwriters, they've penned over twenty hit singles including There's Your Trouble, the Dixie Chicks' Grammy-winning number one smash, and Kenny Wayne Shepherd's Blue On Black, which topped the rock and blues charts for an amazing 17 weeks and was hailed as Billboard Magazine's Rock Track of the Year. Tia's discography also includes hits for country icons like Alan Jackson (That'd Be Alright) and Trisha Yearwood (Heaven, Heartache and the Power of Love), but she's perhaps best known as the writer of I Hope You Dance, the life affirming anthem that has touched countless lives and won numerous accolades, including a Grammy award for Best Country Song. A huge country and pop hit in America for Lee Ann Womack, I Hope You Dance was also a top-five hit in Europe for Irish singer Ronan Keating, and a new version by soul legend Gladys Knight was featured prominently in the Tyler Perry film The Family That Preys. Tia has written four best-selling books inspired by the song as well. Mark, meanwhile, has showcased his guitar wizardry and soulful vocals on internationally-acclaimed albums for the Vanguard and ZYX labels, shared stages with many of his musical heroes, including B.B. King, Jeff Beck and Lynrd Skynrd, and can often be found in Nashville recording studios, working as a session musician and producer. A 'live' DVD and CD featuring Mark and his band at the legendary German TV concert series 'Rockpalast' was released in fall 2009.

In concert together, Mark and Tia are a captivating and truly entertaining duo. Their music continues to take them all over the world, sharing with audiences the same excitement and passionate artistry that is the hallmark of their songs.
